Packing granola bars and beef jerky, I don't need any commie burgers anyway.

Bring some to share. Food is a limiting factor, especially if everything is closed. People who want to stay far from any potential conflict can help by carrying extra food, water, and first aid supplies.

Preparation

As part of preparation download your own copy of the actual orders. What the order says, the title and what the press reports are often different. You may need D.C. as well as MD and VA.

During election season around here, gatherings for political reasons were exempt from limits. That pesky 1st amendment.

Clearing public information on officially caused deliberate traffic issues can be done here on TDW, such as if a bridge is closed, but there is a need for on-the-ground point to point communications. Nuances of this have been discussed elsewhere already. TLDR: Handheld radios to backup or replace cell phones.

If you are in a convoy of a half a dozen cars or so, send someone 5-10 minutes ahead to report a clear path. If they get clogged up, send someone else up an alternative route until you get through. The main body of the convoy should not stop, just slow your speed down and let the scout car get ahead. If you have stopped for your final break before your last push, let the scouts go first before everyone else

She can't successfully lock it down.

Congresscritters staff and supporting businesses like taxi cabs all have to operate that day. Indoor dining

She could create friction at major locations, but information leaks and if she creates too much, that becomes the news story.

Pedes are mobile; D.C. is a fixed location that must remain open to at least some so the borders are porous.

More likely than not, they'll just let the surveillance cameras, run then focus limited resources where people converge, at the time they need to.

▼ Carry a fresh pair of socks and mole foam. Try to conserve energy. The cops will just sit in place while protesters expend their energy marching all day. They'll attack at the end of the day when protesters are tired and hungry.

31 There was a thread by a Europede trying to warn those who go to DC 1/6 that the mayor/police will set up roadblocks to divert you away from Congress, and you basically will have to rush them en masse because you have to REACH CONGRESS and not be separated into smaller, isolated groups, and led to "symbolic" areas far from Congress so that the impact will be muffled and neutralized.

6 ▼ If I were to rent a car and drive into DC, I would get FULL COVERAGE for that day, just in case it's "stolen" or vandalized.

I mean antifa has been known to slash tires of Trump supporters and the entire city could be shut down the next day if too many cars are broken down in the traffic circles.
